Dear Friend,

As a periodontist, I see people every day who are ashamed of their teeth. Like the patient I talked to recently who flushed beat red with embarrassment when he told me about a sales presentation he gave to a high-profile client that went terribly wrong.

He was completely humiliated when his partial dentures slipped out during the meeting and nearly everyone sitting at the conference table burst out laughing.

Isn't it time to stop being embarrassed by your teeth?

Well now you can.

And while it won't be the panacea that fixes everything you don't like about your life, it can be the solution to more than you dreamed possible.

With the proper you treatment, you will finally be able to:

Who Benefits From Implant Dentistry?

- Denture wearers frustrated and tired of the problems of full dentures and partial dentures...sick of the goo..., the pain..., the embarrassment of teeth that can literally fall out in their plate.
- Those with bone loss that is causing loss of support for the face or causing ugly, disfiguring appearances to the face.
- Those who have missing teeth or those about to lose teeth due to decay or fracture.
- Accident victims from motor vehicles, baseball, football, or any other sport who want to regain function and appearance.
- Those with a mouthful of problems that just seem to get worse and worse.
- Those whose teeth are otherwise perfect- except for just 1 or 2 missing teeth.
- Those who want to recapture their youthful appearance.
- Those who have significant gum disease.
- Those people who feel they are (as several patients have put it): Dental Disasters with no place to turn.

A Single Missing Tooth Can Cause Damage You Can't See or Feel Until It Is Too Late

Just one. That's right, ONE. A single missing tooth ultimately leads to dramatic shifting in each of your remaining teeth and can cause you to lose additional ones needlessly. The result? Major problems that will cost you huge dollars and lots of time to fix...way more than if you took care of it early on.

How can that be? I'll tell you. Most people with a missing side or back tooth say to themselves, "I can't see it. It doesn't hurt. I'll leave it like that." Unfortunately, these are the words of the average, uninformed person who doesn't realize the serious and even life threatening effects the loss of a tooth can cause.

Let's examine why: Mother Nature designed your teeth to work together, each tooth performing a certain function. When a member of the group is lost, more work is required out of the remaining teeth. They start to shift toward the hole left by the missing tooth, filling the vacuum.

The result? Your smile changes for the worse. Not only do you wind up with a mouth full of VERY crooked teeth, you almost always get a destructive bite as part of the package. This can cause headaches, intolerable jaw joint pain, broken teeth and teeth that wear too fast.

Have you ever seen someone with short front teeth? Odds are 20 to 1 that destructive bite is the cause.

So now you have crooked teeth and a destructive bite threatening to damage them even further. But there's another culprit. Because your teeth won't re-shift and perfectly close the gap, you now have a difficult-to-clean trap for food and bacteria. And this sets the stage for some of the most serious cases of gum disease dentists ever see.

Gum disease is an infection that, left unchecked, spreads to the body doubling the risk for heart disease, heart attack and multiple other health related problems.

So what was once "just a missing tooth" in the back has become life threatening. If just one missing tooth can threaten your entire health, imagine what multiple missing teeth are capable of...completely crippling you.
